Strong Performance

- Government of Ghana has ensured tenure security for rural populations. Land titling is common and land markets function well. Policy promotes equitable access to common property resources.
- The Government encourages varied agricultural research and extension services, and local farmer organisations are involved in setting policy priorities. The extension system is effective and properly reaches out to poor farmers. Government policies, strategies and mechanisms seek to ensure gender equity in access to extension services.
- The National Nutrition Policy/Strategy identifies time bound nutrition targets and a multisectoral and multistakeholder policy coordination mechanism has been set up.
- Policymakers in Ghana benefit from regular nutrition surveys that are statistically representative at national level. The last survey was published in 2011.
- The Government has fully enshrined the International Code of Marketing of Breastmilk Substitutes into domestic law.
- The Government of Ghana promotes complementary feeding practices and has achieved two high doses of vitamin A supplementation for 96% of children in 2013.
- In Ghana 96.4% of women aged 15-49 were visited at least once during pregnancy by skilled health personnel in 2011.
- In Ghana, constitutional protection of the right to social security is strong.

Areas for improvement

- Spending on agriculture (3.43% of public spending in 2013), does not meet government commitments set out in the African Union's Maputo Declaration (10% of public spending).
- Ghana's spending in its health sector (9.7% of public spending in 2012) does not fully meet (15%) commitments set out in the Abuja Declaration.
- In Ghana, the law does not give women legal access to agricultural land equal to men. Men and women have equal economic rights, but this is not effectively enforced and discriminatory practices against women continue, increasing their vulnerability to hunger and undernutrition.
- Ghana does not have a separate budget line for nutrition; this prevents transparency and accountability for spending.
- Weak access to improved sanitation facilities (14.4% in 2012) obstructs better hunger and nutrition outcomes.
- Civil registration rates are weak (62.5% in 2011) and potentially hold back children's access to critical public services such as health and education.
